How to take the best vacation photographs

By SUSAN RUDDIMAN
Mississippi Press Staff

There's nothing like keeping vacation memories fresh by reliving them through photographs. Pulling out the albums or sharing a slide show with family and friends is gratifying.

Those special moments, however, wouldn't be possible if the vacation photographs don't turn out as planned.

David Welford of the Wilson Springs community recalled the day he was filling in for a friend at the one-hour film developing booth at the Pascagoula Wal-Mart.

A customer brought in 10 rolls of film she took while on vacation in Europe. She used her new sophisticated point and shoot ranger finder camera. When Welford discovered there wasn't a photo to print from on any of the rolls of film, he and a co-worker argued over who was going to break the horrible news to the customer.

"She forgot to take the lens cap off. She was looking through the range finder aperture and didn't have a clue the lens cap was still on. The film never saw any light and there was nothing there," Welford said.

The lesson to learn from that disas-

Photography class

David Welford of the Wilson Springs community will be teaching a basic photography class for the Moss Point Recreation Department starting 7 p.m. June 14. The class will meet for two hours a night for the next five Thursdays at the River Front Community Center, 4412 Denny St., Moss Point. To register for the class, call 475-7887.

Welford is full of lessons about photography. He has taught basic photography classes both in Pascagoula and Moss Point since his retirement in 1996 after 30 years with BellSouth. He didn't pick up a camera until 15 years ago when his wife gave him one for his birthday. His hobby took off from there.

"I was getting into middle age and I was looking for a creative outlet. I had fixed telephones and telephone cables, but I had done nothing to be creative. Photography really fulfills a need in me," Welford said.

To learn more about photography, he said he turned to the Pascagoula Public Library where he checked out books and video tapes to study. He has acquired more photography equipment along the way and "burnt a couple of boxcar loads of film making mistakes. But then again, that's the fun of it."

Have fun while taking photographs is what Kim Workman of Gautier recommends. She is an artist and she and her husband, Ian, co-own the art gallery Kimians. Several times a year, they take travel groups to the Caribbean where her husband is a professional diver.

"When we travel, we have no clothes, but lots of camera gear. We have a really good 35 mm camera with several lenses and filters and I have a pocket size camera, an Advantix, for the quick pictures. My husband shoots videos. All my friends who know me say 'Oh, no. She's taking pictures again,'" Mrs. Workman said.

She said when she takes a picture, she is looking at the colors and subject matter and tries to come up with something different. She has framed several of her photographs and sold them. Welford, too, has had commercial success with some of his photographs. Two of his Jackson County pictures were on the cover of last year's "BellSouth, The Real Yellow Pages" telephone book.

Mrs. Workman said she's taken photographs for a number of years.

Special to The Mississippi Press/David Welford

ESTABLISHING — The first picture in a series should be an establishing shot that tells people where you are going.

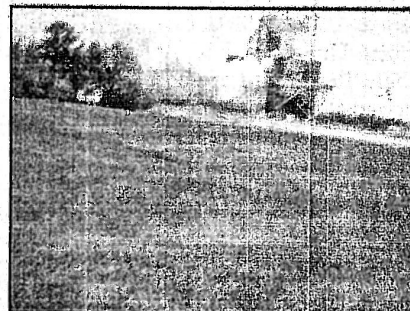

Special to The Mississippi Press/David Welford

GOOD — Once the photographer recovered, he got a good shot through a chain link fence of the Space Shuttle solid booster rocket engine firing.

Special to The Mississippi Press/David Welford

DETAILS — Once you arrive at the site, take detail photographs of items there that capture your interest.

Special to The Mississippi Press/David Welford

POOR — The photographer was distracted by the noise of a Space Shuttle solid booster rocket engine firing. The camera was being held crooked, thus the landscape is off-center.

Special to The Mississippi Press/David Welford

POOR — The people in this photograph are casually sitting around and are not composed very well.

Special to The Mississippi Press/David Welford

GOOD — To take a group photograph of people, it's best to get them close together so their faces clearly can be seen. The photographer needs to be close enough to show the subjects' personalities.

Chief Photographer R. Kelly Boyd

READY TO GO — As a serious hobby photographer, David Welford has collected several types of cameras since he acquired his first one 15 years ago. On the tripod is a Century Graphic. He is holding a Nikon he uses for his flower photography and around his neck is an Olympus point and shoot with a zoom lens and built-in flash he uses as a back-up.

thing and getting candid shots of people. I would take photos without really trying and they would come out. I am self-taught in photography and I think for some people, it just comes naturally," Mrs. Workman said.

Jimmy and Sylvia Williams of Escatawpa will be married for 50 years as of this July and they have documented on film most of their time together. The couple has taken extensive family automobile trips all over the United States and to six provinces in Canada.

"Some days, we'll travel 600 to 700 miles in one day to get to our destination. Our camera and my pillow go everywhere with us," Mrs. Williams said.

She has taken photos from the car window. But most of her pictures are of the scenery of lakes, streams, mountains and the flowers in the area. She said she has quite a collection of covered bridge and lighthouse photographs.

Since manufacturers make more forgiving film today, the technical aspect of photography is not as tough as it was in the past. Welford said he tells his students to go around Jackson County and take photographs with their cameras to practice before going on vacation.

"Jackson County has more in it than the average person can see in a month or two. This area is becoming recognized probably as one of the more biologically diversified areas in North America, so there's lots of scenery, plants, water and critters to get on film. The architectural details on Frederic Sreet in Pascagoula or Dantzler Street in Moss Point are great. I've even taken pictures in my back yard of my grandchildren. Any kind of practice will pay dividends," he said.

Other photography tips include:

- If you do carry a new camera on vacation, then make sure to pack the instruction manual.

use in low light, bright sun or underwater.

- The best way to carry your camera is around your hips, like in a fanny pack. If you do carry your camera around your neck, make sure you have a padded strap.

- If you are on a group tour, make friends with the guide and bus driver because they know the best scenic spots and they might be willing to stop briefly so you can get a good photo.

- Get up early and get out to the attraction before the gates open.

"I want to beat all the tourists there and the light is better in the morning. If you snooze, you lose in photography. You can always eat breakfast later. The best thing to do is look at the light and see if it's what we call sweet light. Morning and evening light is what I go for," Welford said.

- Make notes as you take photographs.

Photography club

The Scranton Camera Club started more than 6 years ago with four members. It has grown since then and for the club's annual photography contest this year, there were more than 165 entries. The pictures were taken by photographers using cameras ranging from throw-aways to digitals.

The club is geared for its members to learn and improve their skills. It meets 7 p.m. the first Monday of the month at the Gaullier Public Library where they have guest speakers. Members also go on photography field trips. For further information, contact Roy Clarke at 497-6905.

"I take a book along with me and write about the highways we've taken, the weather conditions and the pictures I've taken. It's kind of a journal and it means something to me. When we are putting together our photo album once we get home, the journal helps me keep everything in order," Mrs. Williams said.

Welford wears a vest to store his snacks, back-up battery, film, plastic garbage bag (to lay on in case he gets on the ground for a photo) and his pen and pad to make notes.

"I want to know what I did to get that result. I write down the camera settings, the frame number, the weather conditions and even how I felt at the time I took the photo. It amazes me the times I want to go back to look at a picture and need to know exactly how I shot it. I want to know how I can replicate that happy accident," Welford said.

- Once you are home and have your film developed, then get it organized. This is where your notes come in handy.

Mrs. Williams said she has learned to put the date on the back of each photo and write a little something about what it depicts. She buys albums that holds between 200 and 400 pictures and stores the photos in the albums.

"If you take short vacations, then you can use one album for two trips," she said.

Welford stores his pictures and negatives in plastic sleeves which are kept in three-ring binders.

"I don't have to hunt through drawers for that negative I need 10 or 15 years later. The negatives are protected and they don't have mold or mildew on them. I have found the more organized I am, the better my photography is," he said.

Mrs. Workman said when she arrives home after a group trip to the islands, she'll make up an album.

"We then have a photo party and everyone brings their photos to compare. I like to put funny captions on them," she said.

County's Last Confed- erate Veteran Passes

Answering taps for the last time, Joel Welford joined his comrades of years gone by, last Sunday, when he died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Emily Havard, at Rocky Creek.

The death of Mr. Welford marked the passing of the last Confederate soldier in George County. He entered the civil war in the fall of 1864, enlisting from Vernal, Greene County, at which time he was 21 years of age. He served the Confederate states until the end of the war, being attached to Company "A", 36th Alabama Regiment, under Captain Price Williams and Lieutenant Roper.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at Macedonia Church with Rev. Burian Smith, Rev. Pete Welford, Rev. Theo Byrd and Rev. Bunn in charge of the last rites.

Interment was in Macedonia cemetery with McKays Morticians directing. Surviving Mr. Welford are four children, J. H. Welford, Dal Welford, Mrs. Emily Havard and Mrs. John Whatley, all of this county; as well as 37 grandchildren, 70 great grandchildren, 4 great great grandchildren and other relatives.

We extend sympathy to the family of this deceased veteran, during their dark and trying hours.

Honorary pall bearers were H. F. Smith, D. W. Hubbard, George Brown, Tom Dickerson, Clyde Davis, Hardy Davis.

Active pall bearers were: S. C. Davis, D. B. Eubanks, Alex Woodard, Clyde Deakle, Dan Malone, Mark Eubanks. July 29, 1938
